

Helpers by the wayside

The unrest,
modern man is driven by,
has its roots in a disturbed relationship to the ancestors and the soil
Malidoma Patrice Somé

*Everything what lived and lives, is inside of us.
In cells and genes. But not only there.
In our consciousness as well.
But we blocked the access to it.*

Adapted from
Mary Catherine Bateson, Our own Metaphor

To make real the dream of a fulfilled life, to overcome setbacks on the path of desire, we need the help of others as well.

Life is sending us a multifold variety of helpers: they may appear as human beings, animals, mountains, places of nature and wilderness, visions of immaterial beings. But do we contact them likewise and make use of their help? Do we have the courage, the awareness and openness to hear their offers of help and to use them? How do we do that and how can we improve these relationships?

In detail we go into these topics:

1. Helpers, admonishers or threatful beings by the wayside. How do we distinguish them?
2. Is it possible to transform something burdensome into something helpful, bad heritage into good heritage? Ritual gives the space.
3. Ritual: humble submission or cooperation in partnership?
4. Training of cooperation and counselling under supervision
5. Reinforcement of good heritage

This workshop gives the opportunity, to get a precise look at the own connection with helpers, to transform hindering issues in the relationship with them and to open and to deepen the dialogue with them. The guides have long years of experience in the work with ancestors, animal allies and landscape. They learned that in the cooperation with Eduardo Calderon (Peru), Agustin Rivas (Peru) and Malidoma Somé (Burkina Faso, West Africa).

A place of silence, power and alignment especially for people from business world and city life with its high clock rates.

Populated by a lot of trees, the place Unterweinberg 59 houses a tipi, sometimes a sweat lodge, shrines in the tradition of the West African Dagara culture and a house with working room. A good place for single work as well as for workshops.

Right in the middle of Upper Austria's Inn quarter, 50 km north of Salzburg, Mattighofen is situated. Close to the Kobernaussen forest there is the hamlet Unterweinberg in Schalchen.
